

10/17/07

Our three year old son, Cade was having recurring ear infections, nearly every month for a year. He was treated with repeated courses of antibiotics but the infections kept coming back. The antibiotics would upset his digestive system every time and it would take a month for his body to recover from them. When he was just about straightened out he'd get another ear infection and the cycle would start over. We were concerned about possible damage to his hearing and the cost of the doctor appointments and medications to treat these infections was becoming a hardship. His medical doctors were starting to talk about surgery. We decided to start bringing him in to Dr. Mike for adjustments. It has now been over six months since he has had an ear infection and is also healthier in general. Dr. Mike is great with him; Cade actually asks to go see him now by name. When he falls off his bike or bumps his head he tells me, "I need to go see Dr. Mike!" Thanks for all of your help.

Sincerely,

Sara Gegenheimer